Consider reading my blog post on this topic. After reading it take time to study the passage for yourself. Think critically of the blog post, it's conclusions, it's logic.

- Write a paragraph expressing your understanding of the passage. Where you agreed with the author, where you disagreed.
- When you are done with this, consider one point of application from the truth learned. Let it be something you can easily explain to another, and something that helps you by thought or conduct, be a better Christian tomorrow than today.
- Remember: Pastors, writers, leaders and scholars are not without error, and they are not capable of being completely objective. We all have our biases. Remember that the Word is our content, and the Lord is the Lord of that Word. Listen to his Word foremost. Other people ought to be encouragers and helpers, not overlords.
